Agents and educators from China, Japan, and Korea will attend together

Held at the Shilla Seoul hotel, the conference will bring together 600-700 educators, agents, exhibitors and VIP guests (including politicians and CEOs) from predominantly Asian countries, but also Europe. Haebin added that it was the first year that agents and educators from China, Japan, and Korea would attend together, which would "emphasise Asian education".

Industry experts will speak on the first day of the event including Jodie Gray, Senior International Manager of English UK and Study World and Markus Badde, CEO of ICEF.

K Conference has also signed an MOU with Korea University News Network, a Korean newspaper reporting on HE which will cover the conference. "We thought that working with UNN was a good way to spread the word regarding what K Conference is doing and what its ultimate goal is," Haebin said.

Korea is a significant market in international education, sending 112,000 students abroad in 2008 (last available data, UNESCO). However, between 2005 and 2009 it increased its own international numbers from 22,500 to 76,000. It wants to raise this to 100,000 by 2014.
